Buckout Road

Over here in Westchester County, NY, which is right next to where I live, we have Buckout Road. According to the legends and who's telling them, the road is haunted by 3 witches who were hung from a tree. Apparently, you can see them hanging some nights, but I haven't yet. There is also the legend of albino cannibals, but that's just ridiclious.

There's some other stuff I'm forgetting, but there's a website up if anyone wants to read up on it. The only creepy thing to happen to me was I was walking down the road with 2 friends one night all shoulder to shoulder so we took up basically the width of the road. We all got creepy vibes, which was off cause we'd been there many times before and never felt like that. About a quarter mile down the road we all are feeling too spooked and turn around. About 300 yards from where we parked, we notice a cross in the road. We stop and snap photos and then my sister calls me and tells me my two shepards at home are bugging out for no reason. Getting very aggressive at seemingly nothing.

Anyways, we finish up and head back to the ca,r and then about 5 mins after driving it hits me. There wasn't a cross in the road on the way there. It was like 4 feet by 5 feet. No way we would have missed it. Either way I look at it creeps me out. Either a ghost did something, or some creep put that there after watching us walk by, then stayed and waited for us to come back and find it. I don't know and I don't really want to know.

That's my only really creep experience there and I've been there like 150 times. If anyone wants to go, be careful. I've had to dip into the woods before to get away from the cops. I was in the it for like 2 hours trying to get back to the whip without being noticed. Surprisingly, nothing happened when I was in the woods focused on something else.
